

SCHLELBERG

TWO SHORES.
ONE FAILING DOOR.

A village that must keep sowing. A city that has forgotten whose lives sustain it.

Across twenty-six centuries, Tobious and Mariya fight for the same people from opposite shores. Their story follows the promises of power, the work of survival, and the cost of loving someone whose choice you cannot make.

This edition includes six narrative paintings spanning two facing pages.

On the ninth day of the occupation, the soldiers come for the seed. Beneath his village, Tobious finds something they want even more: a door into a city twenty-six hundred years away.

Veyr offers him a shield, a legendary blade, and the strength he could not find at home. But its wonders rest on lives its keepers have chosen not to count. Between the centuries, the Hollow Ones gather.

While Mariya fights to keep their people alive, Tobious must learn what his new power costs—and who has been made to pay. Saving both shores will demand a choice no sword can make for them.
